

ECOLOGY, LANDSCAPE AND CONSERVATION

Lectures and debate

Ecology, Landscape and Polity: A Longer View of India's Environmental History Lecture by Mahesh Rangarajan

2 October at 14:15–16:00, English Park Campus, the Geijer Hall

Co-organised by the Department of History and CEMUS (Centre for Environment and Development Studies)

<http://www.hist.uu.se/Forskning/Seminarier/Seminarium/tabid/5574/language/sv-SE/Default.aspx?EventsId=119012>

Panel debate on “Nation, Conservation and Democracy”

Mahesh Rangarajan, Mukul Sharma, and May-Britt Öhman

3 October at 14:15–16:00, English Park Campus, the Geijer Hall

Co-organised by the research node Mind and Nature, and the Forum for South Asia Studies

Conservation and Community Engagement: Critical Questions from India Lecture by Mukul Sharma

4 October at 13:00–15:00, English Park Campus, 6/0031

Co-organised by the research node Mind and Nature, and the Forum for Africa Studies

Mahesh Rangarajan is professor of history and the Director of the Nehru Memorial Museum and Library in New Delhi. He is a leading scholar in environmental history with a particular focus on India, and a political analyst commenting in public media on wildlife conservation and Indian politics.*

Mukul Sharma is an independent scholar and writer, and holds the position of South Asia Regional Director of Climate Parliament. He has worked in relation to a wide spectrum of the South Asian society – government agencies, media, research organizations and international agencies.*

May-Britt Öhman, PhD in the History of Science and Technology, works at the Centre for Gender Research, Uppsala University. She leads the project “DAMMED: Security, Risk and Resilience around the Dams of Sub-Arctica”, researching hydropower in relation to ecology, social life and identity formation among the Sámi.*