

Welcome to Actors and Strategies for Change—Towards Global Sustainabilities, 2014!

With a growing number of unsustainable environmental, economic, and social trends, how can different actors work for sustainable alternatives? How can we develop capacities, strategies and tactics that achieve lasting and real changes in the local and global world?

If you have not accepted your admission to the course make sure to do so before December 20th at www.antagning.se!

Roll-call (upprop) for the course is Monday January 27 at 17.15 in Blåsenhus room 12:004, von Kraemers Allé 1A. You have to attend in person (with valid reason, send a stand-in) at the roll call and remain active throughout the course, otherwise you will permanently lose your place. There is no web registration at www.studentportalen.uu.se.

Important! If you can't attend the registration, please notify us by sending an email to asc@csduppsala.uu.se. We have more applicants for our courses this coming spring semester than we can accept, so it's extra important that you notify us via email if you cannot attend the registration, but still want to take the course.

Introductory Lecture

All CEMUS courses kick off with an inspiring and thought provoking introductory lecture. This spring we have the pleasure to have Bengt Gustafsson, professor of theoretical astrophysics and one of the driving forces behind the establishment of CEMUS, give a talk on sustainability, student-engagement and the future of Higher Education. The lecture and discussion will take place on Monday, January 20th 17:15- 19:00, in Sal X in the Main University Building, Biskopsgatan 3 (see attached map).

Literature

The following books will be read during the spring semester:

Higgins, Polly. (2012). Earth is our Business: Changing the Rules of the Game. London, Shephard-Walwyn (Publishers) Ltd.

A second book will be a selection of thematic books that will deepen the understanding of a more specific issue or case. There will also be a selection articles compiled in a course reader, which will be available for purchase at the start of the semester. Supplementary lectures and documentaries will also be available online.

Practical Information

The course is worth 7.5 credits and starts January 27th, continuing through until May 26th. Classes will be held on Monday evenings in the Blåsenhus building (see map) between 17:15 and 19:00. Workshop sessions will run until 20.00. There will also be a few extra sessions taking place at other times during the semester. A preliminary course schedule is currently available on our course portal. Here you can also find information on course literature.

Visit our course portal regularly for the latest updates. You'll find us at www.cemusstudent.se/
